

University of Colorado
Department of Mathematics
Problem of the Month
April 2020

Let R be a ring with 1. Show that if every element of R is a product of idempotent elements, then R is commutative.

(An idempotent element of a ring is an element $e \in R$ such that $e^2 = e$.)