

University of Colorado
Department of Mathematics
Problem of the Month
October 2017

The graph of a continuous, strictly increasing function is cut off with two horizontal lines. Find a point on the graph between the intersection points such that the sum of the two areas bounded by the lines, the graph, and the vertical line through this point is minimized.